"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Blum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicines. If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

MRS. THOMAS TAYLOR,
 Blum, Tex.

Poultry and Farm Notes

Do not try to force nature. In fitting young fries for the market give the chicks proper food, plenty of room, clean quarters, freedom from lice and nature will do the rest.

Pennsylvania correspondent who raised 300 chickens last year says they are the best potato-bug traps he ever used except ducks which cannot be beaten for that purpose.

Sow a patch of row peas near the poultry yard. Do not harvest the peas when ripe but turn the hens into them when the green grass disappears and they will thrive upon them.

Summer selection should be kept up until the fowls are fully grown. Dispose of every little runt that shows up, because they are not worth keeping.

The health of the chickens is effected by poor drainage in the poultry yards.

Leg weakness is often caused by keeping chicks constantly on a board floor.

A hen that lays 150 eggs a year costs no more to feed than the one that only lays 75 eggs.

The main thing in feeding for eggs when prices are high, is a warm place for the hens to roost.

Scaly leg may be cured by two or three applications of kerosene.

The beginner with an incubator will do well to follow instructions closely and not do any experimenting.

If you expect to have good healthy poultry, the drinking pans must not be neglected. They must be clean.

A gallon tin fruit can with holes made a half inch from the open end and inverted over an inch deep pie pan makes an ideal drinking fountain. Use the scrub brush on the pan once in awhile, too.

Have a yard about 8x10 feet fenced in with chicken wire. Put a good, comfortable but small hen house by it so it will open inside the yard. Have no nests of any kind in it but plenty of roosts. Put any sitting hens in there which you wish to break up, feed them well and water regularly, in fact, treat them in a humane way and they will soon go to laying without any of the brutal treatment so often practiced.

There are pear trees now in the vicinity of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, supposed to have been growing at the time of the Revolution, and which are in good healthy condition; and numerous ones which, evidently, have passed 75 years.

When the mother's milk cannot be used for her calf, try to get the milk from a cow with a calf as old as the one you are feeding on the bottle, as the milk of a cow in the seventh or eighth month of her period of lactation is bad for a very young calf.

Farm sanitation is of the greatest importance, for on it depends in no small degree the health of the farmer and his family, and to a less extent that of the dweller in cities.

A ewe without milk makes a poor mother. Feed if necessary to get the milk flow, and you'll find the investment a good one. Roots of any kind, alfalfa hay, or a small grain feed will work wonders.

The horse can be made to masticate his food by putting finely cut hay with the grain. A ration of half prairie-grass hay and half alfalfa will give almost as good gains as a ration of alfalfa alone.

While the orchard is coming into bearing, try vegetable growing as a side line. This makes one of the surest and best sources of income.

Corn planted upon land which has long been in corn is likely to suffer from the attacks of corn root lice.

Corn planted on land recently in sod is likely to suffer from attacks of white grubs, wire worms and cut-worms.

Corn must not follow corn when the corn root-worm is abundant.

Corn planted on clover sod, wheat stubble, oat stubble, cowpea or soybean land, unless too recently out of grass sod is likely to be absolutely free from serious insect attack.

Corn success is due in great measure to proper variety selection.

Never give drugs to a horse any more than you would to a baby unless he is downright sick. Shutting off his feed will cure all minor ills.
